Song Xin's work evolves from fashion and computational arts to performance and body practices. In her creations, the relationship between technological systems and the body is not one of collaboration, but a process of rupture and reconstruction. She uses games and performance to test reality, where the body becomes a site for exploration, resistance, and self-redefinition within the ever-evolving spaces of the virtual and the real. She has showcased her solo and collaborative work throughout London in venues like IKLECTIK, Artsect Gallery and Fold, as well as internationally in Berlin, Leipzig, Shanghai, Vicenza, Poznań, and other cities. Currently based in London.
